Sen. Stamas legislation allowing sale of abandoned Alpena post passes Senate

LANSING – Legislation allowing the state to sell an old Michigan State Police post in Alpena passed the Senate Wednesday, announced state Sen. Tony Stamas, R-Midland.

Senate Bill 1124, introduced by Stamas, authorizes the State Administrative Board to sell property under the jurisdiction of the Department of State Police located in the city of Alpena.

“This bill will allow the state to sell the property and save money while encouraging new business development in Alpena,” Stamas said. “Passing this bill is a step in the right direction.”

Selling the old post and a half-acre piece of land would allow the state to avoid annual maintenance and upkeep costs to maintain the vacant building.

SB 1124 now heads to the House of Representatives for approval.
